In early 1944 the victory of the Allied forces in World War II was almost certain. The question was to know what would follow the bloodiest armed conflict that history had ever known. It was in this context that, on January 11th 1944, U. S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt launched his proposal for a 'Second Bill of Rights'.

In his speech to the Congress on the state of the Union, Roosevelt began by stressing «certain inalienable political rights», under whose sign the American republic was born. But he recognised that those rights had proved to be inadequate, solely by themselves, to ensure «equality in the pursuit of happiness». In his words:

«We have come to a clear realisation of the fact that true individual freedom cannot exist without economic security and independence. "Necessitous men are not free men". People who are hungry and out of a job are the stuff of which dictatorships are made.

In our day these economic truths have become accepted as self-evident. We have accepted, so to speak, a second Bill of Rights under which a new basis of security and prosperity can be established for all regardless of station, race, or creed.

Among these are: The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries or shops or farms or mines of the Nation; The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation; The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living; The right of every businessman, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad; The right of every family to a decent home; The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health; The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident, and unemployment; The right to a good education. All of these rights spell security.»

In Roosevelt's words, «freedom from fear is eternally linked with freedom from want.»

It is this legacy that we want to celebrate. The best way to do it is to deepen the meaning of rights in a multidisciplinary reflection, in order to reach a clearer understanding of the challenges of social rights in contemporary societies, especially the present European context.

The Conference will include three moments:

- (i) A plenary session with speeches by four guest speakers;
- (ii) A multidisciplinary session, with experts in Law, Political Theory and Philosophy, Sociology and Economics; and
- (iii) An interactive session led by a panel of commentators with the discussion of papers selected through an international call for papers.

The scholars who have confirmed their participation in the conference include MARK TUSHNET (Harvard Law School), JEFF KING (UCL Faculty of Laws), OCTÁVIO FERRAZ (Warwick School of Law), JORGE REIS NOVAIS (University of Lisbon School of Law), and JOÃO LOUREIRO (University of Coimbra School of Law).

The organisers invite the submission of paper proposals, among other topics, on: (1) the welfare state crisis and its future, (2) the nature of social rights and its articulation with civil and political rights, (3) the justiciability of social rights and judicial review of public policies. Submissions from theoretical, comparative and national perspectives are welcome.

ABSTRACT SUBMISSION PROCEDURE

Post-doctoral and doctoral students interested in presenting a paper on these topics are invited to submit an abstract (max. 500 words) and a short CV by 23rd February 2014 at icjp@fd.ul.pt.

Applicants will be notified of the results of the selection process by 1th March 2014. The deadline for submitting papers is 27th April 2014.

Meals during the days of the conference and accommodation (two nights) will be provided for.

The accepted papers might subsequently be published by the Lisbon Centre for Research in Public Law.
