CALL FOR PAPERS

Multilevel legislative drafting and Legislative Impact Assessment

The University of Lisbon School of Law, Nova School of Law, and the International Association of Legislation (IAL) are pleased to announce the International Conference on “Multilevel legislative drafting and Legislative Impact Assessment”, within the scope of the ‘LegImpact Project PTDC/DIR-OUT/32353/2017 – Legislative production as a means of carrying out public policies: quantitative analysis and socio-economic impact’, that will be held in hybrid format in Lisbon, on 15 July 2022.

We encourage scholars, academics, and researchers from all over the world to participate in the parallel sessions that will take place, on the subjects of “Multilevel legislative drafting and transposition of directives” and “Methods of legislative impact assessment”.

To participate you should send an abstract on one of these two topics:

- Multilevel legislative drafting and transposition of directives: in multilevel systems such as the EU or federal or regional States, there is the need of legislative action by the State level to give full effect to supra-national legal norms, such as directives in the EU. This gives rise to problems, risks, and challenges in the transposition or implementation procedure, namely related with the level of discretion of the lower level, translation problems in multilingual environments, or the “gold-plating” phenomenon;
- Methods of legislative impact assessment: discuss the complexity of the possible methods of legislative impact assessment, from a theoretical and/or a practical point of view, and also case studies that applied methodological tools to measure impact, risks, and results of legislative frameworks in the EU and internationally, considering limits and challenges of its implementation.
